Re: Malas, Andrew      CDC # AT-4451      Court Dockets: 13F03634/13F90313

Inmate Malas is a prolific drug dealer and felon, and should not be paroled. The circumstances surrounding his current convictions as well as his prior criminal record show that he poses an unreasonable risk of violence to the community.

On June 6, 2013, narcotics detectives served a search warrant at the defendant's residence. Contacted inside the residence was inmate Malas, several of his narcotics associates, his young children ages 6 and 9 and a plethora of narcotics and packaging material. Detectives also located 3 digital scales, several 12-gauge rounds, and two .9mm 15 round magazines that were fully loaded. Located on the floor of the children's bedroom was various forms of narcotic paraphernalia including ten hypodermic syringes. Malas' young children told law enforcement that their dad had many "friends" that came over.

At the time the search warrant was executed, Malas had three pending felony cases. In February 2013, Malas was contacted in his car with large quantities of cocaine, methamphetamine, heroin, psilocin mushrooms and marijuana. One month later, he was the sole occupant of an injury collision. Inside his vehicle at that time were more large quantities of narcotics including: cocaine, methamphetamine, heroin, morphine and other opiates. Just one month prior to the execution of the search warrant Malas was again stopped in his car with a large amount of narcotics including: methamphetamine, heroin, marijuana and prescription pills. Instead of ceasing his criminal conduct, he returned to criminal activity, exposing his two young children to the dangers associated with narcotics dealing.

Malas has repeatedly been given chances to correct his aberrant behavior. His [REDACTED] record started back in 1998 when he was arrested for holding a knife up to his ex-girlfriend's neck while threatening to kill her. He was allowed to plead to a lesser charge, but continued to commit crime and suffer other convictions. After finally being placed in custody for his last felony spree, he continued his poor behavior. Malas picked up several write-ups while in custody at the Sacramento main jail, including being under the influence of methamphetamine for which he received fifteen days of full restriction.

From the limited record that is available at this time, it is clear that inmate Malas should not be released as he poses a significant, unreasonable risk of violence to the community. Parole should be denied.
